A MESSAGE TO OUR PARTNERS

We are so grateful for your consideration of sponsorship for Decolonized Beatz Indigenous World Pride (DBIWP). The first inaugural event will be held on May 30, 2025 at the Arena Stage and June 1, 2025 at the Atlas Performance Arts Center on Piscataway land ("Washington, D.C., U.S.").

DBIWP is a way for Indigenous Queer artists to challenge colonial narratives of queerness and reach Indigenous people through their own stories on an international stage. This is how we advance racial justice in queer communities and amplify Indigenous queer voices, as most legislation and press centers white queerness. We have a network of international Indigenous queer event collaborators, leaders, speakers, and performers committed to DBIWP.

DBIWP will include diverse Indigenous creatives, including disabled and chronically ill people, women, AfroIndigenous, and other minoritized members of Indigenous communities.

Your support, big or small, allows us to put forth this event for our community. For more information about us, you can visit:

WHO WE ARE

Crushing Colonialism is an Indigenous-led 501(c3) non-profit that uplifts Indigenous people through media and traditional storytelling. We advocate for the just funding and employment of Native media workers and storytellers, create paid professional opportunities, and produce international programs to inform and uplift marginalized community members.

We are a national non-profit, focusing on reaching Indigenous communities across the United States and abroad with place based events, print, and digital content. We combat racism, ableism, and oppression by supporting education and narrative building at national and international levels to advance equity and justice, focusing on Indigenous people telling our stories. Indigenous people still face hyper-erasure despite being targeted with high rates of violence and discrimination. We're independently telling our stories on a national and international stage often for the first time.

Our objectives are always to honor Indigenous creativity, social history, and organizing by creating nurturing spaces for storytelling and expression rooted in anti-racism, and disability and language justice, and creating opportunities for empowerment through cultural preservation. The audiences we reach include Indigenous people across the globe, organizers doing adjacent work (for example, we reach many environmental organizers with our decolonial environmental justice events), Disabled people (both Indigenous and non-Indigenous, looking for decolonial approaches to disability), 2SLGBTQIA+ people (Indigenous and non-Indigenous), and the general public at large, who often have not engaged with Indigenous-created stories before.
